in part because we are a not for profit financial cooperative and have no private investors to satisfy. We also have lower marketing costs and overhead than commercial institutions. Thus, we can pay our members above-average rates on deposits and charge below-average rates on loans and credit cards.

Is my money safe?
Although credit unions generally pay higher rates on savings accounts and other types of investments than banks do, those higher rates don’t translate into higher risk. That’s because the National Credit Union Share Insurance Fund, the credit union’s equivalent of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp, insures each account up to $100,000.

Who can become a member?
You qualify for membership if you work for or belong to any of the groups shown in what we call our Field of Membership. The Field of Membership includes the Florida State University community as well as many companies that conduct business with or for the university.

Current Florida State University Credit Union Field of Membership:
1) FSU Students
2) FSU Faculty and Staff
3) FSU Alumni
4) FSU Boosters
5) Companies that conduct business with or for FSU
6) Family of existing Florida State University Credit Union members
7) Residents and staff of Edenbrook Senior Living Services

Join Today!
Becoming a member of Florida State University Credit Union is easy. Fill out our simple application—available on our website, by mail, fax, or at one of our offices. Include a low, lifetime membership fee along with a small initial deposit. That’s it!

Mission Statement:
Maximize members’ financial well-being.

Vision Statement:
Florida State University Credit Union will strive to create a sense of community where the common and individual financial needs of each member-owner are uniquely met at a level of quality no other entity can achieve.
